Restoration and Rejuvenation

Meticulously refurbished by the current owner, the 4,650 sq ft Georgian residence has been thoughtfully restored to offer an elegant blend of period architecture with contemporary living.

Features include a magnificent 32ft double reception room spanning the width of the house, an extensive principal suite, plus a cinema room, gymnasium and cocktail bar.

The interiors are of the highest finishes, with a bespoke Clive Christian kitchen, integrated Miele and Gaggenau appliances, and a seamless blend of traditional craftsmanship with contemporary comfort, from soaring ceiling heights to beautifully detailed cornicing throughout.

A Haven of Tranquillity

Complemented by access to the manicured residents' gardens of Chester Square, the property offers a genuine sense of peace and privacy in the heart of Belgravia.

A large timber-decked private terrace to the rear provides a wonderful setting for outdoor entertaining, alongside a balcony overlooking the square's gardens and an additional patio. Practical amenities include an integral double garage with off-street parking for a further vehicle directly outside, a rare convenience in this part of Central London.

Location

Chester Square is one of Belgravia's most storied addresses, the last of the great garden squares laid out by Thomas Cubitt for the Grosvenor family in the 1830s. Its distinguished list of former residents includes Margaret Thatcher, who made No. 29 her home after leaving office, and Mary Shelley, author of Frankenstein.

This rare pedigree, combined with a tranquil private garden setting in the heart of Central London, has made Chester Square one of the most sought-after addresses in the capital; just moments from the world-class boutiques, restaurants and amenities of Knightsbridge, Sloane Square and Elizabeth Street, with Hyde Park, Victoria and the West End all close at hand.
